FULL TEXT

O'BRIAN: "This is Jack O'Brian of the World Journal Tribune, and my guests today are John Malone who is an Assistant Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. His parview happens to be the New York office of the FBI, and Victor Turin who is a special agent in charge of espionage at the New York FBI office."

"We're going to talk about a lot of elements of the FBI, from syndicated crime, crime in general, to espionage, and welcome, gentlemen, to my little show."

MALONE: "Thank you. Glad to be here."

TURIN: "Glad to be here."

O'BRIAN: "John, and John Malone is a friend of mine, we live in the same neighborhood. As a matter of fact, he operates in the same neighborhood, Sixty-ninth Street where the FBI is located, high in the building. I went up there one time and went through the FBI building and they discovered that their shooting range where they practice their shooting, which looks like a beautifully designed shooting range especially for that purpose, was not designed for that purpose at all."

"It had at one time been a furrier's headquarters where he stored furs in great big thick walls three feet thick, and - or something like that, and long, and ideally set up to be a shooting range."

MALONE: "Right. Right. When the building was taken over that was converted into the range, yes."

O'BRIAN: "You'll be moving out of that building one of these
